

The Liberator

1918 - 1924

Provided are one color image of each of the 78 covers of “The Liberator” printed. Interspersed in this file are occasional “extras”: images of variant covers, and in four instances high resolution single bit black and white scans of a color cover (provided in addition to the original color cover) where it was felt this provided an interesting view of the artwork in question.

Original color covers are numbered in the thumbnails sequentially 1 thru 78. These correspond to the whole issue numbering of “The Liberator”. “Extra” material will bear in the thumbnails a word or two explaining what their function or significance is.

Color scans are mostly 300 dpi 24 bit color (there may be an occasional 400 dpi 24 bit color scan here or there). Black and white single bit scans are made at 600 or 1200 dpi.

All scanning done by me, personally, from originals in my personal collection, in Tim Davenport’s personal collection, and in the collection of Holt Labor Library between 2012 and 2014.

Two copies of Feb 1919 cover are present.
One each of two variants that were printed:
one with banner in red ink,
the other with banner in black ink.

Also includes (after showing an original color image of it)
an experiment in removing the red background
from the March 1919 cover, rendering it in black and white,
to explore what the original artist's sketch might have looked like.
