SAVES CITIZENS $420,000 A YEAR

Due to recent action by The Minneapolis City Council, another drop in your household gas rate becomes effective on gas bills issued February 1st and thereafter.

This is the 6th rate cut since October, 1937-a total saving of $420,000 per year to gas users.

The February 1st reduction of 2 cents per 1,000 cubic feet of gas means a saving annually of $56,000.

You now can enjoy the best gas service in the city's history—at the lowest rate.

As you know, more than 95% of Minneapolis homes use gas for important household tasks because modern gas appliances are far superior to other domestic appliances. Look at this performance record:

Beautiful new gas ranges now are backed by a 20-year burner guarantee.

New Servel gas refrigerators also are backed by a 10year guarantee-the only refrigerator so safeguarded.

> When you install a new Ruud automatic water heater, with the Monel Metal tank, you get a 20-year guarantee of clean rust-free water - 6 gallons for less than 1 cent.

> Before you invest in any new appliance, learn why you can do it better, and cheaper, with gas.

The thought that comes to my mind is: What's going to happen when the artificial prosperity of non-productive defense work is over, and we start paying for these things? What will another depression, that as far as we can see will be of far greater severity than the last one, do to our democracy and our form of government? What will individual persons do in the way of preparation for the future hard times, spend it on silk shirts and cars or slap it in the sock? And what could individuals do anyway? Experience has taught us that if you save, the government takes it in the form of taxes, the bankers' advice is unsound, stocks are traps set by manipulators, and bonds can become so much wall paper. We are organized now for economic security, but when hard times come, our need for organization is going to be many times greater than it is at the present time. What we can do now as individuals is to help others organize unions. Preamble of Constitution of American Federation of Labor

"Whereas, a struggle is going on in all the nations of the eivilized world between the oppressors and the oppressed of all countries, a struggle between the capitalist and the laborer, which grows in intensity from year to year, and will work disastrous results to the toiling millions if they are not combined for mutual protection and benefit.

"It, therefore, behooves the representatives of the Trade and Labor Unions of America, in convention assembled, to adopt such measures

"We, therefore, declare ourselves in favor of the formation of a thorough Federation, embracing every trade and labor organisation

THE DEBATE

Labor Versus Westbrook Pegler

For all his bombast, for all his charge that the proportion of racketeers in organized labor is higher than in any other group, Pegler hasn't been able to point to even a score of men and women in organized labor whom even HE dares try to pin the label of crook. He takes those few unionists whom he considers vulnerable to attack, and chews them up over and over again in public, chewing with his mouth open. In this chapter we mean to examine one or two of Pegler's examples of "union crooked-

Pegler has perhaps shouted loudest of all about William Bioff, West Coast head of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. The job that Pegler did on Bioff endeared him to bosses throughout the country, and boosted Pegler to the journalistic forefront of the Open Shop drive against the trade unions. Fair enough, let us have a closer look at the Bioff case.

William Bioff was appointed international union representative in 1934. He was placed in charge of organization on the West Coast. A strike in 1933 had left the unions in the movie studios at a low ebb. The AFL studio crafts could muster only 159 members when Bioff took over. Under Bioff's guidance the AFL increased its membership a hundredfold and more. The union was able to win wage increase after increase from the studios. Through union strength, studio workers are today averaging about $6,000,000 more than in 1934. Hours are shorter. Working conditions are better.

Let Pat Casey, attorney for the big movie studios, describe what kind of union the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees was under Bioff's guidance: "I will say in all fairness that the International Alliance has made more fights for their men than any other labor organization in the world. They have moved in and got money You are talking about labor getting as much as $1.41 an hour. Does that happen anywhere else in the United States? No, but it happens here in the studios. There is not a minute in the day when they (the union) are not on our necks for something for their men.' (From an anti-labor article on Bioff in the Saturday Evening Post, written by Florabel Muir, in the issue of January 27, 1940.)

In November, 1939, says this Post article, "Under threat of crippling business with a nationwide strike, Willie coerced another ten per cent raise for a group of the toilers under his rule . . . He has never stopped trying to band all film workers into 'one big union'.'

This was the situation in the movie industry when Pegler came out on the West Coast. The movie bosses through their agents tipped off Pegler. Pegler went to Chicago and spent several days in police headquarters. Chicago was Bioff's home town. With the aid of the cops Pegler found that eighteen years before, in 1922, William Bioff had as a youth been convicted of a pandering charge. He had served eight days of his jail term, and then was freed on appeal. The Appellate Court later affirmed the verdict, but Boff never went back to jail. This was the only black mark that could be found on Bioff's

It was enough for a man like Pegler, it was enough for the moguls of the motion picture industry. Pegler wrote up in his lurid moralistic style the story about the slip Bioff had made in his youth. The studio industry and the boss press and the cops picked it up. Bioff went back to jail to serve the unexpired sentence for a misdeed committed eighteen years previously.

Pegler's crying jag about William Bioff is a fake from beginning to end.

Labor Attitude Towards Bioff Now neither we nor any other group of good union men and women will condone Bioff for his misstep in Chicago. Insofar as Bioff deviated from trade unionism, insofar as he left the line of working in the interests of his union membership, we do not support him. But insofar as Bioff functioned in the interests of his union membership, insofar as he worked faithfully to make the union more efective, insofar as he helped the union membership to win better wages and hours and conditions, we endorse Bioff. AND MAKE NO MISTAKE. IT WAS BECAUSE BIOFF WAS EFFECTIVE IN WORKING TO IM-PROVE THE LOT OF THE THEATRICAL TRADES WORKERS THAT THE EMPLOYERS WERE ANX-IOUS TO REMOVE HIM FROM THE SCENE. It was for THIS, and not because William Bioff some twenty years ago had fallen from the path, that Hollywood was eager to get rid of Bioff.

As is well known, the people controlling the motion picture industry are recognized the world over for their Puritanical morals, for the cloistered ascetic lives they live.

We can just imagine the fat Hollywood moguls in the meeting when word comes that Pegler has discovered that the union negotiator who, as spokesman for the studio workers, had forced many a wage increase from them, had strayed from the straight and narrow path some twenty years ago in Chicago, and was thus liable to removal from his union post.

How the very mention of such an episode must have shocked these stainless citizens. I can see the blushes mount in the whiskey-stained cheeks of those Hollywood bosses, their embarrassment at the mere mention of moral transgression, their eyelids fluttering modestly downward over their bloodshot orbs. Ah, what sickening hypocrisy coats this whole

Bioff incident. There are so very many examples of union racketeering lying close to Westbrook Pegler's hand, don't you see, that he had to go back two score years in the life of a West Coast unionist, spend days combing the police records of Chicago, to find one illegal episode in the life of an efficient union organizer. Then how our poison pen artist huffed and puffed to blow up that episode to the proportions of the crime of the century, to smear organized labor. Principles They Symbolize Why, William Bioff behind the bars is a better man than Westbrook Pegler, as far as the workers of this nation are concerned. Because Bioffat certain periods in his life, in his own way, according to his understanding and ability—acted to improve the conditions of those who toil. Bioff, you see, stood for a principle. He stood for the principle that workers should get higher wages and shorter hours and better working conditions and job security. Pegler, too, stands for a principle. Pegler is the symbol of the Open Shop, of low wages, of long hours, of industrial slavery.

Of his own moral transgression, Bioff has said: "I was a youngster at the time. I never had proper Independent Truck Chatter

The Post article mentioned above said that the Los Angeles Central Labor Union passed a resolution defending William Bioff. We don't know if this is true, but hope that it is. Against vultures like Pegler, labor should defend the Bioffs a hundred

The Case of Petrillo

Another labor leader whom Pegler regularly castigates in his column is James Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians and of the Chicago local of that organization. Whenever our pickle-pussed columnist finds himself at the end of his rope, he trots out Petrillo. Petrillo is a dictator. Petrillo wears expensive clothes. Petrillo drives late model cars. Petrillo gets almost as much a year as Westbrook Pegler, etc.

Indeed, Pegler will tell you all the gossip about James Petrillo. But he will NEVER divulge such facts

That in 1922 when Petrillo became a leader of the American Federation of Musicians it had 4,000 members, and that today it has 158,000 members;

That in 1910 when Petrillo was an orchestra member, musicians in Chicago received $2 an evening for playing and that today they get $21;

That musicians in the theatre pit who used to average $12 a week now receive $99;

That members of the Chicago Federation of Labor receive a $1,000 death benefit;

That each of the 750 locals of the Musicians Union has autonomy in governing the conduct of its members, and in determining wage scales;

That players in the best public school bands in Chicago re awarded free memberships in the Chicago Federation of

And yet it is exactly THESE achievements that cause the bosses and their front man, Pegler, to try to smear Petrillo.

We are not acquainted with Petrillo or Bioff, nor do we pretend to know intimately the problems of their industry, or how the unions are meeting these problems. It is quite possible that the union methods of Petrillo and Bioff are not our methods. We would differ, for instance, on the score of high salaries for union officials. We oppose the idea of union officials receiving salaries of the dimensions of Pegler's $60,000-a-year stipend — not because these same union leaders couldn't command the same or much higher monetary rewards outside the union movement, not because the men might not be worth their salaries in value to the union, but because we think the whole idea of trying to measure a man's value to unionism in dollars and cents is dead wrong. And because we believe that wages paid union officials should approximate the wages paid workers in the trade. Such a rule, we believe, gives the union official a constant incentive to better the wage scale of those workers he represents, and keeps him close to their problems and outlook.

But against Pegler we will defend even the high salaries of those few union officials in the higher brackets. We will do this because we know the enemy hates these unionists, not for their salaries, but because they are effective instruments of their union membership in defending and advancing the cause of unionism.

Had we but the space, we should like nothing better than to take each one of Pegler's claims of "union racketeering" and show to our readers the joker in Pegler's arguments.

Pegler is at his most grotesque when, in one and the same breath, he will charge William Green or some other union figure with being a dictator-and then froth at the mouth because Green or the AFL executive council has no dictatorial power to interfere in the autonomy of the AFL affiliates and remove some union official whom Pegler dislikes. You can't have it both ways, Mr. Pegler. You can't charge that the union movement is a dictatorship, and then bitterly complain at the absence of dictatorial powers within the union structure.

Concluding installment next week: The mystery of Pegler's typewriter ribbon.
